Peer Certification Program Data

HUGE shout-out to our amazing Epidemiologist, Nivy Meethan
Her incredible work on CA's Peer Certification data has been praised as an example of national standards by SAMHSA!

The development of meaningful metrics relative to a robust and sustainable peer workforce can be a next step toward states aligning with the National Model Standards. States can measure and track the number of peers who 1) apply for certification, 2) obtain and retain certification, 3) attain training and do not become certified, and 4) become certified, enter the workforce, expand employment opportunities, and enter into supervisory roles. Additionally, measurement regarding the type of employment that certified peers obtain and retain can reflect the quality of the certification process. Metrics regarding ethics complaints and resolution could be an important barometer to gauge how well a specific standard is being addressed. California's Peer Support Specialist Certification Program Data Dashboard is an example of a data transparency approach that could serve to inform progress and process.
