

FUNDING OPPORTUNITY Grants for Community Engagement

The Los Angeles County Department of Mental Health (LACDMH) – through its Prevention and Early Intervention (PEI) funding and in collaboration with CalMHSA – will award grants to engage communities to foster stronger connections between individuals within communities to help combat contributing factor to mental health crises.

Community Engagement Grants are intended to:

- 1) Create civic opportunities that promote interconnectedness within diverse cultural communities.
- 2) Distribute resources and messages throughout the county.
- 3) Increase awareness of and access to mental health services and resources.

Who is CalMHSA?

The California Mental Health Services Authority (CalMHSA) a Joint Powers Authority, is an independent administrative and fiscal government agency, focused on the efficient delivery of California mental health projects for its members (including Los Angeles County). CalMHSA will be the administrative manager for these grants.

CalMHSA is the administrative manager for the grants. Awardees will submit their applications to CalMHSA and will receive funding (based on availability). Funds will be awarded to a wide variety of organizations and individuals, and will be disseminated equitably through the Los Angeles region.

Information and Grant Application are available at CalMHSA and Los Angeles County Department of Mental Health.

For any questions regarding this grant opportunity, please email info@calmhsa.org.

Background:

While crisis text and phone lines are essential tools for addressing individuals in immediate crises, they are short-term measure utilized at a point of crisis. LACDMH is seeking to focus upon a longer-term preventive solution to the growing suicide epidemic – as well as other serious mental health challenges – by supporting community efforts to build long-lasting foundations of in-person interconnectivity. Such efforts, centered on community civic engagement and volunteerism, will help provide the structure and support for meaningful sustained engagement with individuals. That engagement and connectivity will be the bedrock from which to counter isolation, alienation, and other risk factors that can lead to depression, despair, and risk for suicide.

Individuals who are able to connect with one another in meaningful ways strengthen their own resilience while exponentially benefitting their community. Taking even minimal time to connect can help loved one, neighbors, colleagues, and members of the community in need while weaving a fabric of resilience and belonging to counter the challenges of today's digitally-connected (but often personally unconnected) world.

Recent studies and reports have demonstrated that a sense of purpose can aid in providing a sense of wellbeing and personal recovery from mental health concerns. Recovery can mean different things to different people, however, for man, recovery is about the realization of goals, and the development of relationships and skills that support a positive life, with or without ongoing mental health problems. While there is no universally accepted definition of recovery, one definition (often referred to as the “recovery model”) argues for the importance of building the resilience of people with mental health problems and supporting their identity and self-esteem. It is a strength-based approach that does not focus solely on symptoms and which emphasizes resilience and control over life's challenges. This model aims to help people with mental health problems move forward, set new goals, and take part in relationships and activities that are meaningful.

Grant Program:

Grants will be awarded to engage communities and promote mental health and wellbeing through community and civic engagement. Currently, alienation form community and lack of meaningful connections in an individual's life contribute to at-risk factors for depression, opioid and alcohol addiction, and suicide. The methods for fostering meaningful connection may take various forms and should be targeted to engage audiences in a wide variety of ways, including but not limited to: community health fairs, volunteer efforts, concerts, community picnics, art show, symposiums, outreach activities, and team sports.

Regardless of the nature of event, the importance of community and meaningful connections with family, neighbors, colleagues, and communities should be promoted through messages and resources, using culturally-appropriate language(s) and methodology.

To call attention to this work and its importance, funded projects are expected to take place during Mental Health Awareness Month in May 2019.
